The Allies knew that they had to destroy this division before it could be deployed against them. But how? The division was heavily guarded, and any attempt to attack it head-on would likely result in disaster.

That's when the U.S. Army Rangers stepped in. The Rangers were an elite special forces unit that had been trained to carry out daring raids behind enemy lines. They were the perfect unit for the job.

On the night of June 12, 1943, a small group of Rangers infiltrated Rommel's lines and attacked the armored division. The Rangers fought their way through the German defenses, destroying tanks and trucks and causing chaos among the enemy troops.

The raid was a complete success. The Rangers destroyed the armored division, and they did it without losing a single man. It was one of the most daring and successful raids in the history of the U.S. Army.

The raid on Rommel's armored division is a testament to the skill and courage of the U.S. Army Rangers. It is a story that has been told and retold for generations, and it continues to inspire soldiers to this day.
